Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Monday 27 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Dull, damp start, then mainly dry, becoming brighter.

Today:
Cloudy, damp start but patchy rain becoming confined to Northern Isles this morning. Otherwise becoming mostly dry and brighter with some sunshine breaking through. A little milder with lighter southerly winds.

Tonight:
The northern half of Scotland will be dry with clear periods and a widespread frost. Cloudier and less cold further south with outbreaks of rain later tonight. Light winds.

Tuesday:
Rain over Central Lowlands and southern Scotland clearing during the morning. Dry, brighter weather further north extending to all parts in the afternoon. Winds staying light.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
A changeable and milder few days. Bands of rain will sweep northeastwards across the Country with drier, brighter interludes between the rain bands. Becoming windy at times too.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.